EMERGING STRATEGIES AND CRITERIA FOR THE DIAGNOSIS AND MANAGEMENT OF MYOCARDITIS VIRTUAL ROUNDTABLE

There is a fair amount of variability among the current classification and diagnostic criteria for myocarditis making its treatment and management challenging. The 2022 Emerging Strategies and Criteria for the Diagnosis and Management of Myocarditis Heart House Roundtable is designed to explore gaps associated with the pathogenesis, diagnosis, treatment, and prognosis of myocarditis with the goal of providing uniformity around its definition to improve disease management.

Discussions at the Roundtable will examine the continuum of myocardial injury and myocarditis; clinical, imaging, and pathology criteria; evolving biomarkers; social impacts on patients and caregivers; and coverage for screening and diagnostic strategies. In addition, the discussions will explore evolving management strategies as well as opportunities for future research in the space.

HEART HOUSE ROUNDTABLES

Heart House Roundtables explore the practical issues that clinicians and patients face every day within high-value clinical areas. These meetings are grounded in the concept of convening a broad range of expertise to include representatives from professional societies, patients, federal agencies, integrated health systems, and others as identified. Through interactive and in-depth discussions, participants not only identify and clarify gaps in clinical care, but also brainstorm potential solutions to help drive better patient care and outcomes. Roundtables have historically been used to inform the development of actionable content to include clinical policy as well as clinician and patient tools to be used at the point of care.
